

TABLE OF CONTENTS

BOOK ONE

FOREWORD	xiii
PREFACE	xvii
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	xxiii
INTRODUCTION	1
Chapters
I. SUMMARY OF SOVIET NAVAL THEORY AND POLICY (1917-1956)
The Old School	5
The Interim "Small-War" Strategy	6
The Young School	7
"Support" - A Command-of-the-Sea Surrogate	8
The Soviet School	11
The Key Ship Types - Aircraft Carriers	13
Navy Calls For Carriers	14
Command of the Sea	14
Zones of Defense	17
Carriers and Command of the Sea	19
Belli's New Thinking	19
Limited Command of the Sea	20
Panteleyev on Anti-SLOC	21
Eliseyev's Views	22
Belli on the Pacific War	23
Other Views of the Late '40s	24
Views in Early '50s	38
History of Naval Art (1953)	41
V'yunenکو's Views in 1953	45
Stepanov's Views in 1953	47
Piterskiy's Views in 1953	48
Air Superiority and Carriers	48
Command of the Sea Again	50
Shavtsov on Command of the Sea in 1955	52
Command of the Sea per Platonov	57
A Tour d'Horizon	58
History of Naval Art Reviewed	60

II. THE KHRUSHCHEV PERIOD 1956-1964
Introduction	67
Soviet Perceptions of the Seaborne Threat:	67
General	67
The Nuclear Threat from Carrier Planes	68
The Nuclear Threat from Missile Submarines	71
The Nuclear Threat from Cruise Missiles	73
The Threat of Amphibious Invasion	74
The Envisioned Nature of a Future General War	77
Khrushchev's Neo-Young School Shipbuilding Policy	78
Command-of-the-Sea Theory Held Invalid and Aircraft Carriers Not Necessary	80
The Fluctuating Relative Importance Attributed to Large Surface Ships and Submarines	83
Navy's Very Existence Endangered	89
Naval Policy Under Khrushchev and the Navy's Responses
General	91
Soviet School Advocates Limited-Command and Carriers	100
Calls for Balanced-Force Revisions of Policy	105
Calls for a Balanced-Force Structure	108
Gorshkov's Progress Toward a Balanced-Force Structure	109
Navy Advocates Construction of Large Surface Ships	113
Construction of Aircraft Carriers in Particular Advocated	118
Nuclear Weapons Seen as the Great Force Equalizer	123
The Navy's Roles
General	128
"Create a powerful defense at sea"	128
"Protect state interests on the seas and oceans"	128
The Navy's Missions
General	130
The Anti-Carrier Mission	132
The Anti-SSBN Mission	134
The Anti-SLOC Mission	143
The SSBN-Strike Mission	146
SSBN Withholding?	151
The Army Coastal Flank Support Mission	152
The SLOC-Protection Mission	158
The SSBN-Protection "Function"	162

III. THE EARLY BREZHNEV PERIOD, 1965-1971

The Projected Nature of Future War

General	201
A Future War Would "Inevitably" Become Nuclear?	201
A Future War Start With a Surprise Nuclear Attack?	204
A Future War Would be Global, Between Coalitions, Devastating, Uncompromising	206
A Short War, Possibly Protracted	208
Nature of "Initial Period" of War	208
Nature of "Subsequent Period" of War	212
Prerequisites to "Full Victory"	213
Nature of War in Naval TVDs	214

Soviet Perceptions of the Seaborne Threat

General	216
The Threat from SSBNs	217
The Threat from Aircraft Carriers	219
Soviet Perception of a Threat of Amphibious Invasion	222

The Roles of the Navy

General	224
Protection of "State Interests" and Maritime Borders	225
In Strategic Nuclear Deterrence	227
In Performing the USSR's "International Duty"	227

Missions of the Navy and Their Priorities

General	227
The SSBN Withholding "Function"	235
The SSBN-Strike Mission	240
The SSBN-Protection Mission	245
The Anti-Carrier Mission	252
Antisubmarine Warfare, Especially Anti-SSBN ASW	266
The Anti-SLOC Mission	278
The SLOC-Protection Mission	283
The Counter-Landing Mission	286
The Amphibious Landing Mission	290
The Army Coastal Flank-Support Mission	295

Policy Disputes: Neo-Young School versus Soviet School
General	299
Submarines as the "Basic" Force versus Balanced Forces	299
Support for Construction of Large Surface Ships	305
Support for Construction of Aircraft Carriers	313
Command-of-the-Sea Theory and Strategy	320
Nuclear Weapons a Panacea for Naval Inferiority?	331
Were the Naval Forces Restricted to the Blue Belt?	336

Naval Policy 1965-1971

The Defense Policy Context	339
Overall Naval Construction	341
Naval Forces Customized for Nuclear War	343
SSBN Construction Given Top Priority	344
Navy Not Being Provided Enough Nuclear Weapons	346
Nuclear Propulsion for Surface Ships Urged	347
All Future Submarines Should Have Nuclear-Power Plants	348
Numerical Superiority in Ships No Longer of Decisive Importance	349
Army Claims Navy Already Has Enough Large Surface Ships	350
The Key Players in Formulating Naval Policy	352
Soviet Claims to be Developing as a Great Naval Power	353
The Navy's Standing with the Political Leadership	354
The Navy's Standing in the Defense Establishment	354
Endnotes to Chapter III	357

BOOK TWO

IV. SOVIET NAVAL THEORY AND POLICY IN THE 'SEVENTIES

Naval Issues in Dispute in the 1971-1981 Decade

Debate over Command-of-the-Sea Theory	417
Debate over Submarines versus "Balanced Forces"	437
Debate over the Need for Aircraft Carriers	446
Nuclear Missiles - A Panacea for Naval Inferiority?	461
The Naval Forces Still Constrained to the Blue Belt?	465

The Envisioned Nature of a Future General War

General	467
U.S. Seen as Planning a Surprise Nuclear Attack on the USSR?	467
Could a General War Remain Conventional Throughout?	476
Global, Between Coalitions, Incredibly Destructive, and Decisive	479
Intercontinental Strategic Warfare	484
Theater Warfare	486
General	487

Use Also to be Made of Conventional Weapons	488
Targets	489
Requirement for Continuous Action by Successive Strikes	490
Continuous, Reliable Reconnaissance Required	492
Surprise	494
Concentration of Forces on Main Axis	497
Dispersal of Forces Imperative	499
Comprehensive Support for All Operations Mandatory	500
Reinforcements from Other Theaters	501
Cooperation of All Forces Indispensable	502
Particular Naval Features of Theater Warfare	504
The "Initial Period" of War	506
Duration of Any General War	512

Soviet Perceptions of the Seaborne Threat to the USSR:

General	514
The Rapid Buildup of the U. S. Navy's Strike Forces	515
U.S./NATO Wartime Control of Key Straits and Narrows	516
The Overall Threat from Seaward	517
The Threat of Encirclement from the Oceans	518
The Threat from SSBNs	523
The Threat from Strategic Cruise Missiles	535
The Threat from Aircraft Carriers	538
The Threat of Amphibious Invasion	543
The Mine Threat	544

Roles of the Navy:

General	547
In Deterrence	547
In Defense of USSR's Maritime Perimeters and State Interests	553

Wartime Missions of the Navy and Their Priorities:

General	557
Naval Missions per Army Sources	557
Mission Priorities	559
Destruction of Enemy Naval Forces Top Priority	564
SSBN Withholding for Strategic Deterrence	565
The SSBNs' Strategic-Strike Mission	593
Their Backup Mission in the TVDs to the SMF	607
Their Targets Limited to Coastal Military Ones	609
Navy Continues Lobbying for Share in Deep Strikes	610
The SSBN-Protection Mission	616
The ASW Threat to SSBNs	616