

Contents

|        |                                                       |     |
|--------|-------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| I.     | Foreword                                              | 5   |
| II.    | Reconstruction of the Firm's ; Founding               | 7   |
| III.   | Since the Age of the Phoenicians . . .                | 11  |
| IV.    | Hamburg – A Seaport with Tradition                    | 19  |
| V.     | David Filby –Instrument Maker from Husum          | 23  |
| VI.    | C. Plath – D. Filby Successor                         | 26  |
| VII.   | The Dawn of a New Age                                 | 32  |
| VIII.  | "In Particular for ExcellentPrecision Work . . ." | 43  |
| IX.    | Theodor Plath Takes over the Helm                     | 47  |
| X.     | C. Plath at the World Exhibition,Paris 1900       | 57  |
| XI.    | Life Inside the Firm of C. Plath                      | 62  |
| XII.   | The Expansion of Business Interests                   | 65  |
| XIII.  | The Advent of Air Navigation                          | 71  |
| XIV.   | C. Plath in the First World War                       | 76  |
| XV.    | From World War to World EconomicCrisis            | 82  |
| XVI.   | From Theodor Plath to Johannes Boysen                 | 89  |
| XVII.  | C. Plath in the Second World War                      | 96  |
| XVIII. | End of the War – The End of C. Plath?                 | 106 |
| XIX.   | The Years of Reconstruction                           | 113 |
| XX.    | The Recent Past of C. Plath                           | 121 |
| XXI.   | Appendices                                            |     |
|        | Author's Epilogue                                     | 140 |
|        | Archives, Libraries and Museumsconsulted          | 141 |
|        | Bibliography                                          | 142 |
|        | Source of Illustrations                               | 144 |